A BOAT CAPSIZED.

Its Occupants Are Thrown Into the Canal. and One Young Lady Is Drowned.

Lucy Berdel, the sixteen-year-old daughter of Louis Berdel, a wagon-maker, living at No. 45 Beaty street, was drowned in the canal last evening, at 6:30 o'clock, near the C. I. St. L. & C. railroad bridge. In company with her sister Emma and Gus Albershardt she had spent the day at a Sunday school pienie, given at Golden Hill. Many of the young people made the trip to the grove in boats, and on the return trip there was a race to see who could row home first. While the boat containing the Berdel sisters and Albershardt was passing under the railroad bridge some friends rowing a larger boat desired to pass it, and while trying to make room for the passage Mr. Albershardt accidentally steered his boat against a pier and it was capsized. The young man managed to catch on to the pier, but both young ladies were thrown into the water. Emms, the younger, kept her presence of mind, and as the water was but five feet deep, managed to support berself until some friends rescued her. Lucy, however, was caught the current, and immediately dis-ared. Some North Indianapolis citizens immediately began a search for her body, and it was found some distance down stream, two hours after the drowning. Lucy Berdel was the eldest of a family of five children, four girls and one boy. Her mother has been very sick for some time, and the news of the death of her daughter caused a relapse.

Fell Under the Cars. Fletcher McLain, formerly a citizen of Indi snapolis, but now residing in Cincinnati, met with an accident, last night, at the crossing of the Big Four and Belt railroads. He was coming from Cincinnati to visit an uncle, George Rubush, who lives near the crossing of the two roads, and in order to gave a long walk, he concluded get off at the junction. When the train began to slacken its speed he stepped off, and was thrown under the wheels. Both legs were cut off above the knees, and he was otherwise injured. He was removed to St. Vincent's Hospital by undertaker Kregio, and the physicians say he cannot survive. He was forty-two years of age and a married man.

GREETINGS TO THE NOMINEE

Gen. Harrison Spends a Part of the Day in Answering Letters and Telegrams.

He Receives Visitors, Among Whom Are South erners-Mr. Shepard, of New York, Confident of Victory-A Zealous Convert.

AT THE HARRISON BOME.

Congratulations in Person, by Wire an Through the Mails. Yesterday was another quiet day at General Harrison's home, although there was a constant stream of visitors from morning until evening. Many citizens who had waited until the excitement of the first few days after the convention had subsided before extending their congratulations called. Quite a number of delegates to the Chicago convention, who were unexpected, stopped on their way home and paid their respects to the nominea Some were from Texas and other Southern States. They were all given a cordial reception, but there was no speech-making. Many strangers passing through the city also stopped for a few hours, and were welcomed at the General's home. General Harrison almost made up his mind to go to Danville at noon to the celebration of those who voted for Fremont, but the press of engagements prevented him. Whenever he was not entertaining callers he was engaged in reading and answering congratulatory telegrams and letters. He spent nearly the entire afternoon dictating answers to his type-writer, and although his son and son-inlaw offered to attend to the task for him, he preferred to word every answer himself. Congratulatory telegrams and letters-mostly the latter -continues to come by the hundreds. The mails yesterday brought him over 400 letters of this nature from the East, West, North and South. A great many, if not a majority of them, was from old soldiers scattered all over the country. Many of the writers served under his command, and recalled touching incidents of the war in which they and the General had figured. The following same from Cawker City, Congratulations from an old soldier of your regiment, whose knapsack you carried when he was exhausted from sickness and fatigue in the Atlanta campaign.

J. S. SNOW,

Company D, Seventieth Indiana Infantry.

A gentleman of Albany, N. Y., wrote as tollows: "England will not slap you in the face with a Canadian codfish and make you believe it an English army blanket, a la Grover Cleveland." The following came from Orleans, Ind .: Hon. Ben Harrison:

The Orleans Republican Club, in session for the purpose of ratifying your nomination, sends you cordial greeting. The staneh supporters of Gresham become the loyal followers of Harrison.

WILL H. TALBOTT, President. LON WAGNER, Secretary.

The Young Men's Republican Club, of Balti more, Md., sends greeting, and recall the fact that they remember the General's visit to them on one occasion. They also announce that they will participate in his inauguration as President. The following telegram, signed "Ten Thousand Republicans," came from Springfield,

The Republicans of southwest Missouri, always true, always virtuous, congratulate you on your nomination. It recalls to the old men of the party the irrepressible memories with which the name of Harrison is associated. It inspires the young men with redoubled energy and zeal in behalf of the principles which have made the Republic the grandest among the nations.

This came from Fort Wayne, Ind.

Seneral Ben Harrison: The undersigned Republicans of Fort Wayne con gratulate you upon your no mination and pledge their enthusiastic support.

A. A. Chapin,
G. E. Bursley,
P. Dickmon,
Fred Beach,
Julius Pottlityer, John Morris, H. H. Robinson, Frank Alderman, Edward White, John A. Scott, Keil Bros., D. N. Foster, Jas. McKay, Ben W. Skelton, W. H. Watt, W. D. Page, T. P. Webb, J. D. Gumpper, Allan H. Dougail.

Among the many other letters and telegrams is one from Rev. Harmon C. Denny, of New York, extending warm congratulations. He was a class-mate of the General in college. Walker Blaine, son of James G. Blaine, writes a congratulatory letter, as does Judge W. H. West, the blind orator of Bellefontaine, O., who placed Blaine in nomination in 1884. A letter from the chairman of the Republican central committee, at Ashtabula, O., states that when the nomination was made at Chicago, a convention composed of seven hundred and ninety delegates was in session there, and that the demonstration they made was unprecedented. Among the many letters from old soldiers was one of much interest from A. W. Doan, a member of the Seventy-ninty Ohio Infantry, which was in General Harrison's brigade. Another old soldier writes: "The old soldiers feel that we have a true and reliable friend in you." An "ex-confederate and loyal citizen," of Virginia, writes: "A loyal citizen of the rea urrected Union extends congratulations." A son of 6ld Governor Kent, of Maine, was elected in 1840, and about whom the famous campaign song originated sent a congratulatory letter predicting a triumphant election. Among the many touching letters was one from a physician of this city, notifying the General of the death of John Lendormi, a member of General Harrison's regiment, the Seventieth. His last words, the physician said, were about his old commander, and it was his most earnest wish that he might be spared long enough to congratulate General Harrison upon his nomination.

PROTECTION FOR INDUSTRIES. The Ticket and Platform in New York an the East.

Hon. Elliott F. Shepard, editor and proprie tor of the New York Mail and Express, was among the visitors at General Harrison's residence yesterday, and dined with the family in the evening. A Journal representative met him at the Bates last night, and was received very cordially. In response to a question, Mr. Shep-

"We expect to carry New York this fall for Harrison and Morton. We are engaged in edu-cating the masses in the truths of protection. and are succeeding admirably. The people, as a rule, already understand it, but in New York and Brooklyn there is a majority of about sixty thousand against us. The majority however, will not be so large this year because of the special efforts being made to educate the masses in the doctrines of protection. They understand that it means high wages, comforts in life, education of their children, and pleasant homes, and in standing by the Republican party they really stand by themselves."
"A kind of missionary work," suggested the

"Yes, that is exactly what we are engaged in, and we expect to carry the State. Mr. Morton is very popular with the people, and I am glad to know that I had the honor of first introducing him into public life. I declined a reelection to Congress, and at the request of the convention I suggested that Morton be nominated. This suggestion was acted upon and that is the way he entered public life. In his first race, he received but a small majority, but the people became acquainted with him, and he was re-elected by over 4,000 majority. He possessed the confidence of President Garfield who tendered him any one of several portfolios but he preferred the Paris mission and served in that capacity for four years. He is very popular with the Irish, one reason being that he sent a ship-load of provisions to that country during the last famine. He is a self-made man, having begun life a poor boy in Vermont. He will be specially acceptable to the business masses who know him and trust him, New York, and the whole country, for that matter, is very much pleased with Harrison. We know that pothing can be truthfully said against him, and we trust that the campaign will be fought out without vituperation or mud-singing. I have received a good many telegrams from New York and other places regarding the result of the convention, and these indicate the hearty indorse ment of the country of the result." Mr. Shepard then handed the reporter the following telegram from Governor Rusk, of Wisconsin, saying, as he did so, that it was but one among many which he had received:

To the delegates a royal greeting to the candidates, an enthusiastic indorsement, and to the platform the high praise of being as specific as the Decalogue as intelligible as the dictionary, and as comprehensive as the Constitution. The grand triumphant march to victory begins in June and will end in November. Wisconsin's motto shall be the party's watchward, "Forward!"

Mr. Shepard will leave for home to-morrow, going by the way of Pittsburg, which he has not seen for thirty years, and where he will he says, endeavor to see if any of the once familiar spots are recognizable.

GOOD WORDS FROM VISITORS. The Californians Greatly Pleased with the City and Caudidates. M. H. De Young, of the San Francisco Chroniele, on returning to Chicago from this city, said to a Tribune reporter: "Indianapolis was wild over the nomination. Owing to an accident which befel our train a few miles south of Monon we did not arrive until long after dark. The city was illuminated in every direction. In the main streets were arches of flame fed with natural gas, and in the residence portion of the city the houses and lawns were elaborately illuminated with Chinese lanterns and torches, and an occasional pyrotechnic display lent variety to the splendor of the The streets were lined with people. Two or three mass-meetings were in progress, and the wildest enthusiasm prevailed. There were loud cheers for the Californians as they were driven through the streets to the residence of General Harrison. There "How were you pleased with the Republican

"As I had never seen him, I had formed an opinion from the pictures which were so plentiful around town last week. I imagined him to be a large and portly man. On the contrary, he is inclined to be small in stature and physique, and he looks older than his age. He has a firm face, is perfectly self-possessed, and under no circumstances would he become unduly excited. He is rather reserved, but not cold. He seemed pleased to meet the Californians. In talking with bim I called his attention to the fact that the coast was 3,000 miles away from the centre of the country, and that its interests were of sufficient importance to demand a representation in the Cabinet. He admitted that in the selection of the President's advisers all sections of the country should have an equal representation. It was impossible for a man from the East or South to know what was most required in the far West; and I think that should he be elected he will call to a Cabinet position some citizen of the coast."

WILL SUPPORT HARRISON.

Dr. W. B. Fletcher Leaves the Democratic

With each day comes increasing evidence of the great support which General Harrison will receive from all sources in this State. Dr. W. B. Fletcher, a life-long Democrat, and one of the most prominent physicians in the State, is the latest to aunounce his allegiance to General Harrison's candidacy and his intention is not proclaiming the fact on the street corners, but asserts it to every one who to lend him his unqualified support. The Doctor asks him about the matter. The Democrats are depressed, and the Republicans correspondingly jubilant over the event. To a Journal reporter Dr. Fletcher said, yesterday, in speaking of the political outlook: "I am no politician, and therefore would not undertake to prophesy. I am quite positive, however, that General Harrison will carry this State. What he will do the country over, I do not undertake to say, for while I take the greatest interest in the politics of my own State, I do not undertake to keep informed upon politics generally."

"I understand you will give General Harrison your personal support? the reporter asked.
"Yes, sir, I will vote for him and do everything in my power to secure him other support. I do this in part because of my personal friendship, having been his neighbor and more or less intimately associated with him for years, but more because I consider him the most capable man to represent the American people the world over on account of the purity and integrity of his character. He is plain, honest and honorable, and in every way a man worthy of the place for which he is a candidate." "You regard his success certain, then, in the

"I do; partly because of the great traits of the man, which many people in the State already recognize and which others will learn before the campaign is over, and partly because of the re-lation of the two parties in this State. The Dem-ocratic party has made some serious blunders since coming into power in this State. One had been in the management of the State benevo-lent institutions. People all over the State are interested in these matters. Here are four new asylums approaching completion, the manage-ment of which will devolve upon the State, one of them costing $270,000 a year. These institutions—the Deaf and Dumb Institute, the Blind Asylum and the Insane Asylums -are far behind those of other States. They should be conducted on a more modern plan. Even Alabama and Georgia are far ahead of Indiana in the conduct of these institutions. The Democratic party gives no promise of reform in this direction; indeed, has held a State convention and adopted a platform without referring to it. But the Republicans, as I understand, are committed to the principle that the benevolent institutions should be conducted on a non-partisan basis. That is an additional reason why I shall vote the Republican ticket this fall."

strength so much greater than it was twelve "Well, there are several reasons for that. In the first place, you must take into consideration the fact that the State has progressed since 1876, and the conditions are not what they were then. This is a progressive age, and the people of Indiana have advanced in the last twelve years. The difference now is that the people of this State know General Harrison, 1876 they didn't. respect his uprightness, his purity. They know

"Why do you consider General Harrison's him to be a plain, blunt man, unpretentious, but dignified and firm. He has always been plain mannered, and simplicity has been the rule of his home life. He is the kind of a man whom the American people appreciate, for they are getting tired of electing to positions of honor the men who are nothing but politicians. General Harrison is a man who always improves by acquaintance. The more people learn of him the better they like him. His character is like a rough diamond. The more you rub it the brighter it gets."

TOKENS OF ESTEEM.

Expressions That Show the Effect of the

Col. Thos. F. Shaw, Moore's Hill, wrote to friend in this city: "Present my congratulations to Gen. Ben Harrison, whom I have known all his life. There are a number of old time Democrats in this village who have already openly avowed their purpose to vote for Gen. Harrison. I knew his father; he was a warm personal friend. As one of old Dearborn's unterrified I voted against his grandfather, but as a Pathfinder Republican I shall be happy to vote for Ben."

Maj. John B. Glover yesterday received the following from S. S. Rockwood, of Madison, Wis: "I rejoice with you. The cannon has alvictory. Already what yes told me of our man -now-as well as yours, has been of great service to me. Everybody about the Capitol is elated. It seems very clear to us all that wisdom finally ruled the convention, and from Governor Rusk down we are all bappy."

They Will Call on the General, At a meeting of the Harrison League last night, it was decided to call, in a body, on the General to-morrow evening. This League is very proud of the fact that it was the first organization formed to advance General Harrison's candidacy. The members will meet to-morrow evening, at 7:30 o'clock, on Delaware street, west of the court-house. Every colored man in the city is earnestly urged to be present and accompany them, whether a member of the club or not. The Brotherhood band will be invited to participate.

A WILD-BOAR HUNT IN SPAIN. Battling with Hounds in the Thickets and at Last Struck Dead.

The heart of the jungle being impenetrable to man, the efforts of the beaters were confined to directing the boarbounds, and by incessant vociferation to drive the game upward toward the posted guns. A big fox or two slipped steatthily past, but for some time the only sounds that reached our position were of human origin. Then, all at once-ye gods! the ecstacy of that moment! -the sonorus bay of our veteran hound Montejo told us as plainly as in articulate words that the quarry was discovered. This proved to be one of those grizzly monsters of which we were in search. His lair was amid a chaotic tumble of boulders islanded in the heart of the matted jungle. Here he bravely stood his ground, and though Montejo was quickly reinforced by the rest of the pack the old tunker showed no intention of abandoning his stronghold. For minutes that passed like hours the conflict raged stationary. The deep baying of the boar-hounds, the frantic barking of the small dogs, and shouts of the mountaineers, mixed with the howls of an incantious podence as he received his death-rip from those terrible tusks—all these conveyed a chorus of wild excitement to the sentinel guns above. Such moments are worth a twelve-month of ordinary life.

The actual scene of war was some half mile below us, hence no immediate denouement was probable or expected, when, all at once, there was a crashing in the brushwood on my front, and a three-parts grown boar, black as Satan, dashed straight for the narrow pass where I held guard. The suddeness of the encounter was disconcerting, and the first shot a clean miss. The bullet, all but grazing his back, uselessly shattered the rock berond and there was barely time to jump aside to avoid a collision. The left barrel told with better effect; a grunt as he received it was followed by a frantic squeal, as an ounce of lead penetrated his vitals, and piegy Hart has for many years been employed with rolled over squealing among the palmettos, his Hildebrand & Fugate, on South Meridian street. life-blood dyeling the weather-bleached rocks and dark green palms. There he lay, kicking and squealing, but ere the broad-bladed navaja could administer the quietus he regained his legs and charged straight. Whether that charge was inspired by motives of vengeance or was merely an attempt to regain the thicket he had left it is difficult to say, but a third bullet at three-yard range terminated his career and laid him lifeless at my feet. During this interlude, though it only occupied a few moments, the main contest in the deep jungle below was approaching its climax. The old tusker at last abandoned his rock fortress, and after several promiscuous skirmishes with the boar-hounds in the thicket he at length appeared in view-a noble, grizzly old boar, slow-ly trotting up the stony slopes on the far left of the line. Here a clean rifle-shot at long range told effectively, breaking a fore leg just below the shoulder. This shot turned him, and back to the thickets he retreated, passing through the dogs and the line of beaters. And now commenced the hue and cry and the real hard work for those who meant to see the end and earn the spoils of war. What followed in that wild hurly-burly-that mad scramble through jungle and thicket, down crag and precipice-it is impossible to decribe exactly. Each man only knows what he did himself, or what he did not do. The writer can answer for two-one of these seated himself contentedly on a rock and lit a cigarette, the other, ten minutes later, arrived on the final scene minus the whole of his nether garments and sundry patches of skin, but in time to take part in the death of as grand a wild boar as roams the Spanjah Sierras.

Not a Kicker To Be Found.

Boston Special in New York Post. Not a kicker can be found here to-day among the Republicans over the nomination of Harrison. Some of them say that Blaine was their first choice, for they honestly believed that he was the best man for them to put up, that he would win more votes than any other man, and they are sorry that he has not been given the nomination, but they also say that Harrison is a good man and that he will draw out the full vote of the party. With some of the leading men he was the first choice, and they are sincerely glad that he has carried off the prize. They are confident of his ability to carry Indiana. Some are particularly satisfied on account of his high character, and say that now the campaign wil be conducted on a clean and wholesome basis and that the discussion will be more on princi

THE CANDIDATES.

It is unanimously agreed that for watches and chains, pins, rings and charms, and all that people want in that way, no more popular ticket has ever been named than

They are sure winners.

TIME ENOUGH

For a few days "rest" is what most people hereabouts want. We beg leave to say that we have the largest and finest stock of it in all of our three departments and seven floors in this market. Shoppers, make a note of this, and come and get as much "best" as you want. Our elevator will carry you to any floor-land you at the door of our celebrated "Dark Room," where you can get abundance of rest amid a scene of splendor not to be found elsewhere.
